TREASURE COAST RESORT RE-OPENS AFTER MULTI-MILLION DOLLAR MAKEOVER

Courtyard Marriott Jensen Beach on Hutchinson Island Unveils All-New Look in Early 2006

JENSEN BEACH, FLORIDA: After being closed for 14 months from hurricane damage, the Courtyard Marriott Jensen Beach has re-opened with a completely new look. The oceanfront hotel was shut down in 2004 after Hurricane Jeanne and was essentially stripped to its shell to make way for this transformation. The multi-million dollar renovation included the entire property from its guestrooms and suites to its public space and pool areas.

“We are thrilled to re-open the Courtyard Marriott and unveil this great new product for travelers to the Treasure Coast and Hutchinson Island,” said Ed Griffith, general manager of the hotel. “The enhancements to the hotel are outstanding from a phenomenal room package including luxury bedding and flat panel televisions to a great pool area with signature waterfall. We look forward to welcoming back past guests and an all new set of customers to our wonderful beachfront hotel.”

In addition to the aforementioned enhancements, the hotel also added four luxury, one-bedroom penthouse suites with dramatic 11 foot ceilings and sweeping ocean views.

The relaxed seclusion of Hutchinson Island harkens back to the days of Old Florida -- quaint shops, uncrowded beaches and always a friendly hello. Located on Florida's Treasure Coast, the Courtyard Marriott Jensen Beach is situated oceanfront on Hutchinson Island -- the Sailfish Capital of the United States. The eight-story hotel offers 110 rooms and suites with a range of amenities and services including refrigerators and microwaves. The property is convenient to all the area attractions including eco-adventures, championship golf and acclaimed fishing and watersports.
